STANFORD — First responders got a chance to practice their disaster-ready skills last Friday morning as they performed a mock disaster drill at Lincoln County High School.

When the fire alarm sounded at around 10 a.m., more than 50 emergency responders from 15-20 different agencies joined forces to evacuate, triage and transport 20-30 fake victims, played by students, to Fort Logan Hospital in Stanford.

Students from the high school's emergency procedures classes played the victims of various injuries related to fire and chemical exposure.

The group of "injured" students were evacuated and escorted to an established triage center set up behind the school building.

Emergency responders — police, fire, and EMS personnel from local and surrounding areas — worked together to group the victims according

The medical staff at Fort Logan Hospital received several fake fire victims and communicated with first responders to match up names and injuries of students for treatment and release.

LCBS health scienc-

"This gives them an opportunity to put into action what they have learned and also witness EMS services perform jobs that (these students) might go into," Moore said.

"It's a great learning experience and also helps them learn what its like to be a patient."

After the scenario was completed, drill participants gathered at the Stanford Arts Center on Depot St. in Stanford to discuss the overall

A first-time-ever "Armed Forces Day Special Event" is planned for Saturday, May 16, at the Lincoln County Public Library to honor veterans from near and far, beginning at 11 a.m.

Harsh winter affects Lincoln cattle producers, hay yields

By Abigail Whitehouse

Warm weather is finally here but for many Lincoln County farmers, the effects of a harsh winter and several below-zero days is still evident.

Cattle producers in the county were dealt a harsh blow during this year's spring-calving season, according to Lincoln County Agricultural Extension Agent Dan Grigson, who said the weather was not common for this area in Kentucky.

"The bad thing for us this year is that was right in the middle of our calving season for our spring-calving cows," Grigson said. "A lot of the folks we talked MORELAND — A woman was arrested for driving under the influence in Lincoln County Sunday morning after her car got hit by a train at a railroad crossing in the Moreland area.

Lincoln County Deputy Sheriff Chase Marcum said he was called to the scene of a collision involving a train versus a red Honda Civic at about 4:00 a.m. near the Community Center Drive area of Moreland.

Marcum said when he arrived on scene and began speaking with the operator of the vehicle, Tara King, of Moreland, and her passenger, Adam Brummett, he immediately smelled alcohol on King's breath and performed a field sobriety test.

King told the deputy that her car had malfunctioned while she was driving over the railroad crossing and that she and Brummett evacuated the vehicle before the train hit.

Stanford grocery surprised when car crashes into building

The interior of Durham's Grocery suffered damages after a car ran into the building Saturday evening.

STANFORD — Customers and staff of Durham's Grocery in Stanford were caught off guard Saturday evening when a 1992 Ford Mustang crashed into the side of the building.

Store Manager Craig Crain said no one was in the aisle when the incident occurred at about 6:40 p.m. — which surprised him considering that's normally a busy time for the store.

The night manager, Tina McIntyre, immediately called 911 and by the time Crain arrived at the store, Stanford Police were already on scene, he said.

According to Stanford officer John Williams, the driver of the uninsured Mustang was operating the vehicle without a license.

Jamie Herring, 19, of Ready Mix Lane — located behind Durham's Grocery — drove her aunt's car to the store and due to an alleged malfunction in the brakes, ran into the left portion of the building.

"Rather than walking to the store, she drove an uninsured vehicle without an operator's license," Williams said.

Williams said he questions whether Herring hit the brakes or the gas pedal.

"She was an inexperienced driver," he said. "She stated that she hit the brakes but due to the extensive damage to the side of the building, she had to have accelerated instead of applying the brakes because she went three feet into the store."

As Herring made her way around the back of the store, the car accelerated and climbed the curb before speeding into the business, Williams said.

Crain said Herring told him the same thing — that she hit the brakes but the car just went faster.

The total cost of damages to the store is unknown at this time because Durham's is still in the process of finding someone to make the repairs.

"This is not a new situation here," Crain said. "This has happened to us twice before, but there was no inside damage."

Following the incident, Durham's was evacuated due to a potential leak of Freon from the drink coolers that were damaged, but Crain said no leak was found.

"The important thing is that no one was hurt," he said.

‘As Country As It Gets’

Lincoln County writer publishes collection of Appalachian stories

By Abigail Whitehouse
abigail@theinteriorjournal.com

The story of Cas Roberts might have begun in Wayne County some fifty years ago, but the cover of his new book “As Country as it Gets” is a picture of a road in southern Lincoln County – the place he calls home today.

Roberts is a poet, but in his newly released book he takes on the storyteller’s role and paints the picture of an Appalachian childhood filled with mountains, logging-mules and moonshine stills.

The collection of stories are snapshots of Roberts’ southern Kentucky past, including “How I became a moonshiner” which tells of his father, a locally-known moonshiner during Prohibition years, and the knowledge of the craft he passed down to his son.

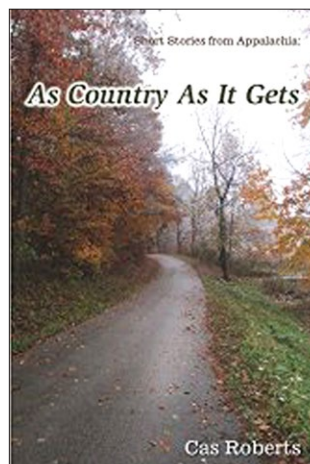

The story goes on to tell of Roberts’ own moonshine-making endeavors, like when he purchased his first fifty-gallon steel drum and set out to construct his own still – following his father’s instructions.

Roberts spent a lot of time taking photographs for the new book – some old and some new – which together connect the present time with the stories of his past.

“I tried to show how the old way of life relates to today,” Roberts said. “I want to preserve our heritage and who we are and where we came from. When I look around and see everything that’s going on in today’s world – it makes me sick for the old one.”

Roberts said his book is different from the actors “playing hillbilly” today on television shows like Appalachian Outlaws and Ax Men – because his stories are real.

A self-taught writer,

Roberts said he’s learned a lot since he first started writing. In 2012, he wrote and published his first book of poems “Appalachian Poetry” through Amazon’s CreateSpace, a self-publishing service for writers.

As a kid, Roberts said he loved to sit around and listen to old men talk but later in life, he realized that no one was ever recording their stories. So he decided to do just that and began writing his memories of a country childhood, from the time he made his own wagon-toys, to the years he spent logging in the mountains.

“There are going to be more stories, Roberts said. “Once I get them in there, I’ve locked it. I’ve documented it and it will go on.”

Although “As Country As It Gets” underwent a handful of edits, Roberts said he tries not to over-edit his work in an effort to preserve the true nature of the stories he tells.

The new book, as well as other writings by Cas Roberts, is available on Amazon for Kindle or in paperback color or black and white. The color version of “As Country As It Gets” is $19.95 and the black and white is $9.95.

Roberts invites anyone interested in his work to visit Amazon or his Facebook page “Appalachian Poetry.”

Store owner killed in crash remembered

Kendra Peek
kpeek@centralkynews.com

KINGS MOUNTAIN — A small community nestled in the hills of western Lincoln County is in mourning after learning that one of their own was killed in a car accident on Wednesday morning.

It wasn’t until Friday that officials identified Ronald Andi, 63, as the man killed while driving the 2001 Pontiac that caught fire after a car hit it in the rear, causing it to flip on U.S. 27 south of Stanford.

Although Andi was from Berea, he was a honorary member of the community, as the owner of the E & P Smart Mart, on KY 501 in Kings Mountain.

“The community seems heartbroken about it,” said Donna Lewis, who worked at the Kings Mountain Post Office and regularly visited the store. “He was always kind and nice. Everyone liked him.”

For about 8 years Andi had been operating the store which that has been a part of the community for much longer.

“The store has always been part of Kings Mountain. It’s always been open and been there,” Lewis said.

Lincoln County Sheriff Curt

The front of E&P Smart Mart in Kings Mountain was decorated in memory of the owner, Ronald Andi, who was killed in a car crash on April 29.

Folger knew Andi too, having visited his store on several occasions, sometimes for incidents and sometimes to shop.

Every morning, Folger said, Andi would open the store at about 3 a.m., and Folger would sometimes stop in.

“He was very friendly, very well liked in the community. He was a hard worker,” Folger said.

Retiring to the Philippines in a few years — that was Andi’s master plan.

“He had made the statements that, with what he would have, he could live like a king in the Philippines,” Folger said.

Andi’s two dogs were in the car with him when the accident occurred and also perished.

“They were his family right now,” Folger said. He wasn’t sure what breed the dogs were, but said it didn’t make a difference to Andi.

“He didn’t care if they were full-blooded or not, they were his babies.”

More than just a store owner, Lewis said, Andi had a concern for everyone who came in.

“One of the things he did that was really sweet, he would always pump gas for the elderly ladies,” she said.

On Valentine’s day, Andi would give out candy to the women and for Christmas he would give out Christmas cards.

“He did have a big impact. He was very good. Very kind to everybody,” Lewis said. “It didn’t matter who you were, he treated you with respect.”

Kentucky State Police are investigating the crash and haven’t yet released information on what caused the lights on Andi’s car to be out, which is why the second driver allegedly did not see him until it was too late. They also haven’t released the name of the second driver.

Protect yourself from the sun

By Anne Davis, A.P.R.N.

Skin cancer is the most common cancer, accounting for nearly half of all cancers diagnosed. According to the American Cancer Society, nearly 73,000 new cases of melanoma – the most serious skin cancer – will be diagnosed in the United States this year while 3.5 million cases of basal cell and squamous cell cancers will be diagnosed.

Sun exposure is the greatest risk factor for non-melanoma skin cancer. Most individuals obtain 80 percent of their lifetime sun exposure before age 18. Individuals with fair complexions or who work outside have a greater risk of developing skin cancer. Smoking also increases an individual’s risk for skin cancer.

Individuals with a close relative who has been diagnosed with melanoma have a greater risk for developing the disease. In addition, tanning bed use also increases the risk for skin cancer.

You can protect yourself from the damaging rays of the sun by observing the following:

- Wear sunscreen with a minimum sun protection factor of 30 before going outdoors.

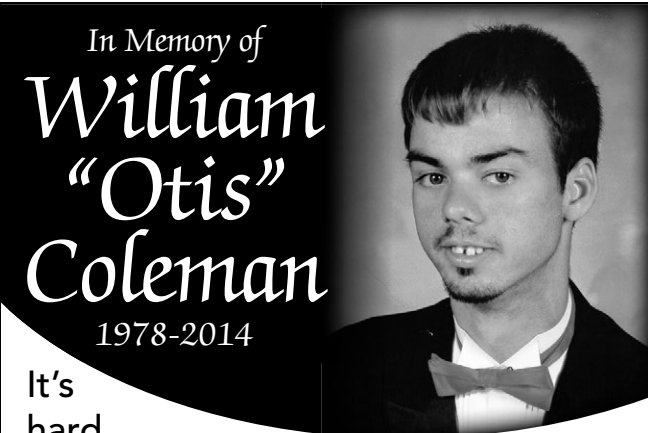

- Seek out shade when possible, especially between 10 a.m. and 2 p.m. when the sun’s rays are strongest.

- Stay out of tanning beds.

- Wear protective clothing when outdoors, including long-sleeved shirts, a broad-brimmed hat and sunglasses that offer at least 99 percent UV protection.

In addition to reducing your risks for skin cancer, you should also check your skin’s blemishes regularly. When checking your skin, look for growths that suddenly change appearance, crust or bleed, and see a dermatologist if you notice these.

Notes from Sara

By Sara Givens

The “Women In White” missionary society of the South District will be having its annual program at the First Baptist Church, Crab Orchard, at 7 p.m. on Friday, May 15. Elder Oliver Miller will be the host pastor, Mrs. Barbara Miller is the missionary president and Elder Jerry Wilkinson is the district moderator.

Mrs. Mae Virgil Masterson, a resident of the Golden LivingCenter, fell and broke her hip. She is a patient at the Ephraim McDowell Regional Medical Center.

Mr. and Mrs. Eric Givens hosted a fun day derby party at their home in Louisville. Approximately sixty guests enjoyed the festivities which included home town guests, Janette, Brenda, Peggy, Doris and George Hocker, Margaret Statement, Sandra Hill, Trudy Gooch, Al Joseph Logan, Bobby and “Jackie” Hocker and Shirell Hocker of Nicholasville, Kelvin and Anita Givens and family, Deidre Martin of Cincinnati, Ohio, Elizabeth Turner of Richmond, Zelda Jones, Sue Jones, Angie Walker, Bonita Custard, Nadine Harper Stanley, Bonnie and John Barnes, Calvin Jones, Callie Jo Harper, Paige Harper, Sara Givens, Barthenis Brown, Dionne Givens, D’Nai Givens, Damion Givens-Ford and Renea Ford of Elizabethtown. Everyone had a great time.

Ms. Barthenia Brown and Mrs. Sara Givens visited Mr. and Mrs. Vick Gilliland during their stay in Louisville. They had a nice time talking about old times and Stanford.

Thought for the week: When counting your blessings, count your mother twice and then some. Have a nice and happy mother’s day!

Letter carriers collecting food

Every second Saturday in May, letter carriers in more than 10,000 cities and towns across America collect the goodness and compassion of their postal customers, who participate in the NALC Stamp Out Hunger National Food Drive — the largest one-day food drive in the nation.

Led by letter carriers represented by the National Association of Letter Carriers (AFL-CIO), with help from rural letter carriers, other postal employees and other volunteers, the drive has delivered more than one billion pounds of food the past 20 years.

Carriers collect non-perishable food donations left by mailboxes and in post offices and deliver them to local community food banks, pantries and shelters. Nearly 1,500 NALC branches in all 50 states, the District of Columbia, Puerto Rico, Guam and the Virgin Islands are involved.

The United States Postal Service, National Association of Letter Carriers, National Rural Letter Carriers’ Association, AFL-CIO, Feeding America, United Way, Valassis and Valpak Direct Marketing Systems are all supporting this year’s Stamp Out Hunger food drive.

To donate, just place a box or can of non-perishable food next to your mailbox before your letter carrier delivers mail on the second Saturday in May. The carrier will do the rest. The food is sorted, and delivered to an area food bank or pantry, where it is available for needy families.

With more than 50 million people facing hunger every day in America, including nearly 17 million children, this drive is one way you can help those in your own city or town who need help.

The Stamp Out Hunger Food Drive has received a number of accolades over the years, including two Presidential Certificates of Achievement.

NEW COVENANT NEWS

By Bethany Rowland

“Just as no one can be forced into belief, so no one can be forced into unbelief.” --Sigmund Freud

Unbelief is a choice. That is what Pastor Joel Rowland taught us Sunday, May 3, at New Covenant Full Gospel Church.

In every person’s life, whether you were raised with a Christian background or not, there comes the choice, “Will I or will I not believe in God?” Belief in God is a choice. You decide based on the way you were raised, or a specific sermon that you heard, or a personal encounter with God that you believe there is a Creator of the universe. Unbelief is the same. Based on the way you were raised, or a philosophical speech, or your own personal decision you decide if you will not believe in God. One person can look at the world around us and believe with no doubt that there has to be a Divine Creator of it all. While another can look around and decide to believe that it all happened in a big bang. One person can believe that the Bible is the living Word of God, while another can believe that it is yet another old book filled with historical facts and characters.

The earth itself and all of it’s intricate details. The way that a human body forms and functions. The innate sense of right and wrong. The ability to love. God has given us a myriad of examples and reasons to believe in Him. He will force Himself on no one. The decision is left up to us. To believe or not to believe...The choice is your’s.

New Covenant Church meets at 213 N. Depot Street in Stanford. Service times include Sunday 11 a.m. worship and Sunday evening 6 p.m. worship and teaching.

By Shelby Lakes

Service began with a baptism at Fairview on Sunday, and was followed by a message by Bro. Johnny Baker which was taken from Revelation 21.

This chapter, Bro. Johnny said, is a break from studying other parts of Revelation, which cover what the earth and lost people will face in the end times. We are given a glimpse of Heaven here. Even those that don’t believe in hell hope heaven is a real place, Bro. Johnny said. But believing something isn’t true does not mean it is not.

We should think about heaven, Bro. Johnny said, and read to us that chapter which includes verse 4, speaking of God dwelling with men: “And God shall wipe away all tears from their eyes; and there shall be no more death, neither sorrow, nor crying, neither shall there be any more pain: for the former things are passed away.” Bro. Johnny also read from John 14, in which Jesus says he is going to prepare a place (heaven) for believers, and says if it were not true, he would tell us. Bro. Johnny said he believes it is because then, like now, people hear so many things that are not true, and Jesus was reassuring them, and us.

Jesus stuck to his task of preaching to lost souls, Bro. Johnny said, and left heaven to be a surprise, but did call it paradise on occasions.

We will have new bodies, Bro. Johnny said, and the earth will be made new without sin, death, suffering, corruption, and sickness. It’s hard to imagine anything so wonderful, but that is what God is preparing for us.

Think of friends and family who were Christians, Bro. Johnny said. They are with him walking on streets of gold in this place that Jesus and Paul call paradise.

Many things of heaven are secret, Bro. Johnny said, and we will be like children opening wrapped gifts. Jesus gave us glimpses to help us through this world of trouble.

“Do you love him,” Bro. Johnny asked. “He loves you enough that he is building this place for you.”

City’s handling of Rice Lake hypocritical

The city of Stanford has decided to stop the public from fishing or boating at the City Lake (Rice Lake). This is a place where many of our local citizens go fishing and take their family to enjoy the summer days. Its easy access for everybody to enjoy the water, without boats zooming by and washing you ashore, like at Cedar Creek Lake.

The City of Stanford has decided there was too much trash, four-wheeling and drug usage out there – so instead of enforcing the law, they decided to stop everybody from using the lake.

You say you want a good place for the youth to go, but you’ve stopped that. I’d say that of the people who decided not to allow any fishings –there’s not a fisherman among you.

Kentucky Fish and Wildlife say they can’t do anything about it because it belongs to the city. This fisherman is sure going to miss fishing out there this year.

I encourage everybody that was enjoying the lake to write a letter to the paper or call your mayor and let your feelings be known.

Messages of hate,
signs of freedom

By Charles C. Haynes

Advertisements will soon appear on New York City buses and subways that may startle even the most hard-bitten New Yorkers.

“Killing Jews is worship that draws us closer to Allah,” reads the ad (a quote attributed to Hamas MTV). A young man is pictured wearing a scarf around his head and face. Under the photo is the statement: “That’s His Jihad. What’s yours?”

The Metropolitan Transit Authority (MTA) has done all it can to ban the controversial ad sponsored by a group called the American Freedom Defense Initiative (AFDI).

But last week, U.S. District Judge John Koeltl ruled that MTA must allow the AFDI ad, rejecting the city’s argument that the message could be misinterpreted as a call to violence against Jews.

“There is no evidence that seeing one of these advertisements on the back of a bus would be sufficient to trigger a violent reaction,” said Judge Koeltl. “Therefore, these ads — offensive as they may be — are still entitled to First Amendment protection.”

The judge relied, in part, on the fact that this and other provocative AFDI ads have been running on public transportation in other cities without incident.

Unless it incites imminent violence or is likely to do so, speech that offends or is viewed as hateful is protected speech under the First Amendment.

Other cities have tried other arguments to stop AFDI ads, mostly to no avail.

Last month, for example, a Pennsylvania federal district court ordered Philadelphia’s transit system to accept a different AFDI ad, this one reading “Islamic Jew-Hatred: It’s in the Quran.” The ad pictures Adolf Hitler meeting with an Arab leader.

In upholding the right of AFDI to run the ad, the court rejected as unconstitutional Philadelphia’s policy of prohibiting ads that “disparage or ridicule” of any person or group on the basis (among other traits) of religious belief.

Judges in these cases may be sympathetic to city officials trying to promote tolerance and civility by banning ads from AFDI, an organization infamous for mean-spirited attacks on Islam and Muslims.

But judges also know that the First Amendment is intended to bar government from determining whose speech is acceptable — and whose speech is not. After all, what is “hate speech” for some may be political or religious conviction for others.

Sadly for the cause of free speech, Philadelphia’s transit authority has responded to the court ruling by suspending all future political or public-issue advertising.

While the First Amendment bars city officials from practicing viewpoint discrimination on city buses and subways (allowing some political or religious views, but not others), the First Amendment permits them to impose content-based restrictions (banning all religious and political views).

By contrast, San Francisco’s transit authority avoided a legal battle by allowing the AFDI ads to go up. At the same time, however, city officials countered the speech by condemning the posters as “racist and offensive” and promising that all proceeds from the AFDI ads will go to San Francisco’s Human Rights Commission.

Free speech is sometimes painful, often offensive and always messy. But consider the alternative.

In Moscow this week, government officials are cleansing the city of swastikas or any other symbols of Nazism in preparation for Victory Day, the celebration of the Soviet Union’s defeat of Germany.

Fearful of government censors, booksellers have removed any book that has offending images on the cover, including the Pulitzer-Prize winning Maus, a graphic novel about the Holocaust by cartoonist Art Spiegelman.

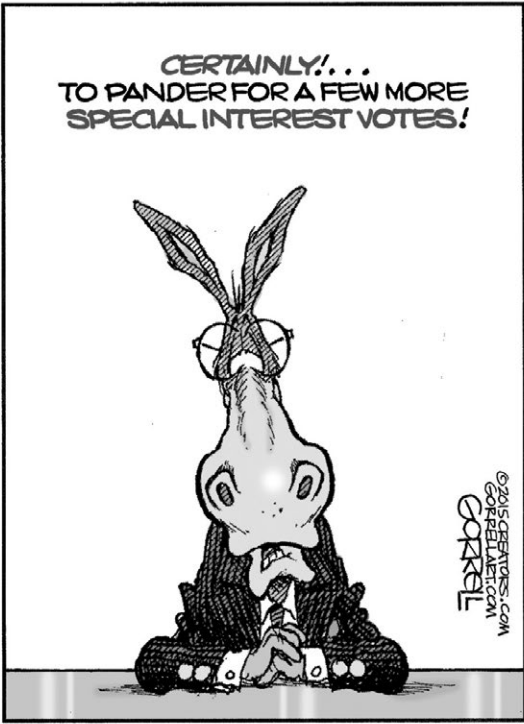

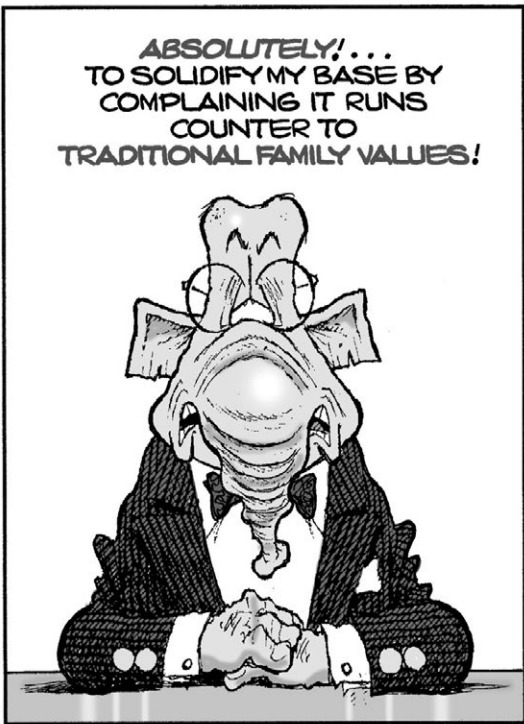

Government censorship, of course, is the law of the land in Russia where it is a criminal offense to “offend people’s religious feeling or question the national dignity of peoples.”

Such is daily life in Moscow, Tehran, Beijing and many other cities with offense-free zones enforced by the state. Those who dare dissent either live in fear of arrest or languish in prison.

So the next time you see a poster that offends, remember that in a free society messages of hate are also signs of freedom.

QUESTION: WOULD YOU ATTEND A GAY WEDDING?

Getting back to the basics

Step away from the screen to spend quality time with loved ones outdoors

By Amelia Orwick
Contributing Columnist
aorwick@jessaminejournal.com

For the past several months, I’ve had the pleasure of expressing my concerns and opinions regarding all-things social media as a writer for Socially Speaking. And if you’ve been keeping up with the weekly column, you know there’s been no shortage of interesting topics for discussion.

From when I first rise in the morning until I fall asleep at night, I am fully plugged into Gmail, Facebook, Instagram, Twitter and a handful of other accounts (some of which bring me pleasure and others do not).

But this week, I want to view technology from a different perspective and encourage you to do the same. Although technology has allowed for all sorts of global advancements, it has also been known to hold us back from getting out and exploring the wonderful world around us.

Join me in celebrating Screen-Free Week now through Sunday by swapping your cell phone, tablet or lap top for a long walk, good book or game of cards.

“Screen-Free Week is an annual, international celebration when families, schools and communities swap digital entertainment for the joys of life beyond the screen,” according to screenfree.org. “Instead of watching TV, surfing the web, or playing with apps and video games, they read, play, think, create, get active and spend more time with family and friends.”

Believe it or not, the first-ever “Turnoff” was organized in 1994, before many even recognized the negative effects of screen time on children and young adults.

But founders Henry Labalme and Matt Pawa ignored their critics and encouraged a million people to participate. Since then, the event has garnered attention from communities, media and medical associations.

Excessive screen time is linked to poor performance at school, childhood obesity and attention problems, according to the Screen-Free Week website. It is also through screens that children and young adults are exposed to “harmful marketing.”

Think of the good it will do both you and your children to escape the same old television shows, advertising pressures and all the other negative associations of screen time to which you’ve become so accustomed.

I understand that technology use is somewhat inevitable in the workplace and at school; it’s at these locations where technology is more helpful than harmful.

What I’m advocating is simply the elimination of technology from home and evening routines — just for one week. Because I think what you’ll find is that you truly enjoy the release that comes with putting away your electronics.

One afternoon a few months ago, I went out to eat with some friends I don’t see often. I was surprised when a member of our group suggested that we all pile our phones in the middle of the table so that they didn’t distract from our conversation and interactions.

A 30-minute meal without a phone?! Was she crazy? Despite our doubts about her sanity, we did as we were told. And what an eye-opening experience it was.

Although I first felt compelled to reach for my phone during any lull in conversation, the urge quickly subsided. I became more wrapped up in the events taking place around me than my need to check Facebook or see if I had received any text messages.

Soon, even pauses in dialogue didn’t necessitate phone usage. There was food to be consumed, music to be heard and people to be observed.

More important than the great experience I had that day was the lesson that I learned from it. Looking back, it seems silly that the thought of disregarding technology for a simple lunch was so absurd.

Even if you refuse to see the toll that screen time takes on your mental and physical health, remember the relationship you have with your friends and family. Don’t deny yourself time with loved ones because you’re busy looking at your phone; I can assure you that your parents, siblings and pals care more about your well being than any random beings you may interact with on social media.

I realize that Screen-Free Week is targeted at children, and most kids aren’t frequent Socially Speaking readers. So parents, this is where you come in.

I urge you to visit screenfree.org for information on how to organize a screen-free event and tips to make your week as successful as possible. But more importantly, I would suggest that you to lead by example.

In a way, you could use a break from technology even more than your children. As adults, you are surrounded by stressors at all hours of the day. Allow yourself the time you need to relax and show your young ones just what it means to enjoy yourself free of technology.

Rebels rout Bat Pats 12-0

By Nancy Leedy
nancy@theinteriorjournal.com

STANFORD — Lincoln County baseball coach Daryl Day has made it clear over the past couple weeks that, if play didn’t improve, that he might be making changes in the lineup.

Day enlisted some of those changes Monday at Boyle County in a 45th rematch, but Lincoln was unable to right itself as the host Rebels rolled 12-0 in five innings to hand the Bat Patriots their 11th straight loss.

Despite the lopsided loss, Day said more changes could still be coming.

“We’re going to keep pushing buttons until we can find people that are going to be willing to come out and play,” he said. “I think we had four or five kids that showed up ready to play today. I’ve got four that will run through that fence for the team. It’s finding the other four or five to go with them.”

And Day never hesitated in making the changes – which included the benching of seniors Josh Wilson, Austin Smith and Cody Lunsford – despite it being a district game.

“We’re already a fourth seed,” he said. “Today’s game is kind of meaningless, unless we can light a fire in our players. Tomorrow, we’ll go back with a lot of regulars and find out if this lit a fire under them.”

Boyle (14-13, 4-1 45th District) used a 7-run second inning to really put Lincoln in the cellar.

The Rebels opened the second with a ground out, then proceeded to tag five hits and earn base on a hit batter and an error. Cameron Walker connected

12th Region tennis: Lasure falters in quarterfinals; Playforth ousted in second round

BEREA — Lincoln County senior Ethan Lasure played well the opening rounds of regional competition at Berea College Friday as he courted back-to-back victories. But his final regional run would come to an early end on Saturday.

Southwestern’s John Dalton couldn’t keep pace with the Patriot senior in the first round of the 12th Region Tennis Tournament with Lasure, who was seeded No. 6 in the tourney, advancing in a 6-1, 6-4 victory. And Lasure racked up another “W” in the round of 16 by beating Chase Frisby of Boyle County 6-4, 6-3.

However, Lasure’s regional march hit a road block in Saturday’s quarterfinal round when he was pitted against Tanner Sparks of West Jessamine, the tournament’s No. 1 seed. Like Spark’s previous opponent, Lasure was unable to get a game off the West Jessamine sophomore as Sparks rolled 6-0, 6-0.

And Sparks lived up to his seeding, advancing to the finals with a 6-2, 6-0 win over Josh Joiner of Danville, then capturing the regional title with a 6-4, 6-2 win over David Gadd of Berea.

“Very proud of him. I mean, Ethan lost in the Godbey, Frith, Cummins lead Lincoln scoring in recent meets

LINCOLN RUNNER Logan Godbey has been putting more and more distance between herself and the competition of late. The LCHS sophomore won the 1600-meter run at both the West Jessamine All-Comers Meet and the Danville All-Comers Meet with times of 5:55.52 and 5:57.68, respectively.

With low roster numbers, the Lincoln County High School track and field teams are not usually contenders for team titles. However, that doesn’t keep the athletes wearing the Lincoln uniform from putting forth their best effort in the field of competition.

Logan Godbey a sophomore at LCHS, Adam Frith, a junior, Royce Cummins, a senior, and the girls 400-meter relay team all proved they can take the heat of competition, by clinching event titles in recent meets at West Jessamine and Danville.

Godbey garnered first-place awards on both tracks, by winning the 1600-meter run. She won at the West Jessamine All-Comers meet with a time of 5:55.52. Her time at the Danville All-Comers meet was slightly slower, but 5:57.68 was still good enough for the win. In each of Godbey’s wins, the top three runners were the same as Madison Southern’s Maria Melhuish took second at both meets and Lincoln’s Morgan Gourley placed third both times. Melhuish’s times were 5:56.25 at West and 5:58.90 at Danville. Gourley ran 5:57.80 at West and 6:02.45 at Danville.

Frith had to kick in a little speed to merit his first-place finish, crossing the finish line in the 800-meter dash at West Jessamine in a time of 2:21.59, two seconds ahead of runner-up Grayson Hearn of East Jessamine. Frith ran a better time in the 800 at Danville, but his 2:11.19 would be bested by Austin Sparrow of Mercer County who won with 2:09.95.

Cummins claimed his track win in a matter of seconds. The Patriot sprinter was the first to the finish line in the 100-meter dash at Danville, winning in just 23.61 seconds. Cummins just missed a win in the 400-meter dash at West Jessamine, with Joe Bandy of West edging past LINCOLN CATCHER Austin Greer tags out Boyle's Cruz Murphy on this second-inning play to put an end to the Rebels' seven-run effort in the at-bat. Boyle won easily in the 45th District matchup, rolling Lincoln 12-0 in five innings.

LINCOLN STARTER Noah Horton got roughed up by Boyle Monday, giving up 10 runs off 12 hits in his two innings on the mound. He pitched three strikeouts. Josh Caudill took the mound in the third and gave up two runs off three hits. He also had three strikeouts.

for an RBI-triple to score Ty Dragan, Josiah Robbins doubled to plate Walker and Robbins scored on a Lincoln error. Addison Coffey, who reached on the error, was driven in by Nick Settles and Nathan Morris, who was hit by Lincoln's Noah Horton, came home on a Kaden Gervasio ground out. Settles made it 9-0 when he scored on a Hunter Mason single.

Boyle would get 14 hits off Horton and reliever Josh Caudill to earn its second win over Lincoln.

Lincoln (7-17, 0-6) managed just two hits off Coffey, who pitched the complete-game win.

Austin Greer singled in the first inning for Lincoln and Parker Monhollen got a hit in the second, but Boyle put Lincoln down 1-2-3 in the third, fourth and fifth innings.

"We didn't pitch it very well. We didn't catch it very well. We didn't hit it very well," Day said. "No offense to these guys (Boyle), but Southwestern's a better team and they only beat us 11-0. We had a lot of adversity in that game, but I thought we at least tried to work through it. Today, other than four or five guys, we didn't have anybody wanting to work through it."

Coffey had six strikeouts in the win and also drove in two runs at the plate.

Walker and Robbins each had three hits and three runs. Walker, Robbins and Coffey scored the Rebels' three first-inning runs, and Walker and Robbins tallied again in the third.

"We're still struggling. We're still pushing buttons," said Day. "It's seeing who's going to be willing to play and trying to figure out what that magic nine is come two a single, Elizabeth Padgett walking on and Rachyl Lyons getting a hit. Norton drove in Norris, Elle Montgomery drove in Padgett and Lyons and Sam Adams, running for Norton, both scored on a Sis Logan base hit to put the Lady Lions back on top, 7-6. After a Hailey McCulley ground out, the Lady Lions added a few more runs. Montgomery was driven in by a Katie Fitzpatrick single, Logan came home on a bases-loaded walk to Norris, Randa Morris, who singled on, scored off a Padgett hit and Fitzpatrick scored the final run on a Lyons' pop out. The sixth inning finally reached its end when Norton lined out. Both teams tagged multiple hits in the big inning, but sloppy defenses also helped each team, with a total of five errors committed in the inning. "I told the girls, we played well enough to win, but poor enough to lose," Bandura said. "For five innings, it was a really clean game, and then the sixth inning, both teams made some errors and gave the other team some things. I made a big base running mistake earlier in the game that we could've maybe scored a few more runs." Garrard did not bat again, with Lincoln going down 1-2-3 in the top of the seventh to end the game. "I was really proud of how we played tonight, and how far we've come in the last couple weeks," said Bandura. "We've just got to clean up a few details and we win a game like that." Slone took the loss for Lincoln. She gave up 11 runs off 17 hits, with six walks and three strikeouts in a complete game. Norton also went the distance for Garrard. She allowed six runs off 12 hits, with three walks and three strikeouts. "I thought Sydney threw really well tonight. She got off the hook a couple times, got a big bases-loaded strike-out and got us out of a jam. We made a few special plays defensively, too. There's a couple plays here and there we've got to make, though, and we didn't make them tonight, and a good team like Garrard is going to pounce on that. They've got good hitters 1-9 and they drove in some runs with their 9-hitter tonight." Garrard scored one run in each of the second, fourth and fifth innings. Fitzpatrick drove in Morris in the second and Montgomery in the fifth. Morris finished with three runs in the win, coming home on a Padgett double in the fourth. Lincoln broke on the scoreboard in the fifth inning, with Green reaching on a single, stealing second and moving to third on a Kelsey Meece hit before stealing home.

Lincoln (9-10) drew nine walks, with Brown, Chyna

Dyehouse and Kelsey Meece each walking twice. Slone pitched a complete-game win, allowing five hits and four walks while striking out four Lexington Christian batters. The Lady Eagles fell to 9-11.

FARM FACTS

Pasture and hay notes

What you do with your hay and pasture fields this week will affect your livestock all year long. So please consider my recommendations. If stored livestock feed is to be available during periods when no growth is occurring, growth which is produced during April and May must be saved for hot summer days and for winter feeding. Most of our forage feed is stored as hay. It is urgent that farmers give attention to those things which will produce not only large quantities of hay, but also the quality of hay that is needed by livestock. It is also important that attention be given to management systems which will maintain stands.

Most farmers waste pasture forage during April, May and June. During this period of rapid growth, fields that are pastured should be small enough that animals can keep the pasture grazed down. If large fields are used that are too big for the livestock herd size, excess spring growth is trampled down and wasted. Once fescue gets to the head stage in a pasture, cattle have to be really hungry to eat it. The use of electric fences to partition off big fields into smaller fields is certainly the most inexpensive way to restrict grazing to small areas. On many farms it will only be necessary to close the gates between large fields holding the cattle off of some pasture fields and using those fields for hay the first cutting. It is good to get your pastures divided down to five total pastures. Then practice rotation from field to field. Try to give each field 3-4 weeks of time to recover before grazing it again. This management practice will increase your livestock's growth, your feed supply, your milk production and your profits.

Now let's talk about hay. Plants which are young, vegetative and actively growing are at their highest point in quality. Compromises must always be made between harvesting for maximum quality, maximum stand life and acceptable yields. The first harvest for fescue, orchardgrass and timothy, should be made when the grasses are in the late boot to early head stage of maturity. This provides the best compromise between maximum yield and maximum quality. When legumes are present in the mixture, time of harvest should be based on the stage of maturity of the legumes. Established stands of red clover and alfalfa should be cut at late bud to very early bloom. Letting plants go to more advanced maturity stages drastically reduces quality of the feed. Look at your fields and you will see that basically every hay field you have should either already be cut or needs to be cut immediately.

Harvest on established alfalfa-grass stands may be made about every 30 days during the summer with the final fall harvest coming off sometime around September 15. After the plants have frozen back near the first of November, growth that has accumulated since September 15 can then be removed either by grazing or by cutting. Red clover also can be cut during the summer at 35 to 40 day intervals and after freeze down if plant growth is sufficiently high enough to cut and rake. One of the biggest mistakes made on Kentucky farms is management of red clover for only one or two cuts per season. This results not only in very poor quality hay, but sometimes can also damage stands of red clover. For grass hay you should get an early May cutting and a mid June cutting. The grass growth will slow down until late September and then grow enough to get an October cutting.

No magic formula can be provided to eliminate the effects of weather on hay quality. The rain fall pattern in Kentucky will almost always result in some hay getting wet before it can be baled. It is a mistake however to let hay stand in the field and wait for perfect weather while hay quality is permitted to deteriorate due to advanced maturity stages. Delays will cost you quality and it will also cost you quantity, since you can lose a cutting, if you wait several days before cutting. Take a chance on the weather, play the odds and hope for the best. Take advantage of the plastic wrapping machines that can be rented locally. This reduces curing time and lets you get up some really good quality hay.

Another important note for pasture and hay fields is to keep the fertility levels good. This is the cheapest way to keep feed costs low. Take some soil samples for your pasture and hay fields and apply what is needed to get good growth to feed your cattle. Our local fertilizer dealers still pay for soil samples that you bring in to me at the Extension Office. If your too busy now, then do this job when you get your other crops planted. But be sure you keep the fertility levels on hay and pasture at adequate levels, to keep yields good and to keep a good long lasting stand.

For more details on hay and pasture management, give me a call, Dan Grigson, Agriculture Agent, 365-2447, U.K. Extension Office, 104 Metker Trail, Stanford.

Let the Earth celebrate your birthday too

You may be familiar with this problem that I run into every year: People always want to know what they should get me for my birthday and I never know what I want. I really don't feel like I need anything, so sometimes it can be a chore finding suggestions that are affordable for the gifter but also something I would really use or enjoy.

This year, I decided to try adding items to my "wish list" that would help me live a more environmentally friendly lifestyle.

I used Amazon.com to create my wishlist because they have many items that I wanted but they also allow you to add items from outside websites that you want. Even if someone doesn't want to purchase something online, an Amazon wishlist can be a good place to put ideas for gifts.

My environmentally friendly wishlist includes reusable produce bags. I really hate using the plastic throw away bags that they have in the grocery stores for bagging produce.

I already use cloth bags and totes to carry my groceries out of the store and avoid the mounds of plastic grocery bags, but I haven't had a nice solution for produce bags — the ones on the big translucent roll that you pull down and then yank on to break off.

It turns out — it's not actually surprising, I just hadn't realized it earlier — there are reusable versions of those bags, too. This is a much better option for carrying around my apples and pears without wasting plastic.

I also added a plate cover to my wishlist. It looks like the top of a cake carrier, but you just press it down on a regular plate and it creates a seal. It's great because you can use it as a cover when you microwave, which saves on the use of paper towels. You can also use it to cover foods to transport them, instead of perhaps one-time use aluminum foil or plastic wrap.

Another item that can help reduce your plastic consumption that I had on my wishlist was cloth dipped in beeswax. It sounds like a random item, but the wraps can be used instead of plastic wraps to store foods.

I put bamboo toothbrushes on my list as well. The bristles are still made of nylon but the handles and head that would normally be made of plastics are made of bamboo. This makes most of the toothbrush biodegradable, which is super exciting.

Another good consequence of having loved ones shop for eco-friendly items for your birthday gift is that it exposes them to items they might not have normally known about and could influence their habits as well. It can also make them feel better about the gifts they are giving because they know it's items that you really want and that those items will be used to make the Earth a better place.

Amanda's Animal Fact of the Week:

The bowhead whale, also known as the arctic whale is, on average, the mammal that lives for the longest time. Bowheads may live for as long as 150-200 years.

Gabriels named Master Conservationists; art and writing winners also honored

By Nancy Leedy

STANFORD — The Lincoln County Conservation District and the District Board is mindful that actively implementing and promoting conservation practices is essential to the preservation of our national resources.

Last Thursday night, the local District celebrated those who work to promote conservation and those who are learning of the importance through their art and writing contests.

Gabriel Gabriel and his son, Philip Gabriel, who operate a 385-acre farm in the Preachersville community, were presented with this year’s Master Conservationist Award, and the county and school art and writing winners received their awards at the District’s annual banquet held at the Lincoln County Middle School.

Retired former District Conservationist Bo Renfro and Soil Conservationist Brent Beard made the presentation of the Master Conservationist Award, recognizing Gabriel Gabriel and Philip Gabriel for an outstanding job of incorporating conservation practices into their daily farm operations.

“He is a man among boys in the field of conservation,” Renfro said of the elder Gabriel. “I had him as a teacher in high school and he is the best teacher I ever had. And I could go on-and-on about the many conservation practices they’ve used.”

“(They) have shown outstanding conservation awareness over time by the installation of Best Management Practices to protect and enhance the natural resources on their operations,” he said.

The Gabriels, who run a beef cattle operation of 115 head, with select calves being sold as feeder stock, have applied several conservation practices over the years, including:

- Rotational grazing systems.
- Livestock ponds with stock tanks.
- Soil erosion control systems consisting of diversions and grassed waterways.
- Almost two miles of pipelines installed from city water sources to 10 new frost-free tanks.
- Implementing no-till cropping practices to reduce impacts to soil and improve fertility.
- Installing fencing practices through the Conservation Reserve Program to protect streams and stream banks while also creating wildlife habitat.

The feed for the Gabriels’ cattle operation is provided from corn silage, hay and harvested wheat cover crop.

“In recognition of the love they have shown for the land by using it properly and establishing the necessary conservation practices, it is my great pleasure and honor to present this year’s Master Conservationist Award to Mr. Gabriel Gabriel and Mr. Philip Gabriel,” said Renfro.

While the Master Conservationist Award is the top award presented by the Lincoln County Conservation District, the District spent much of the night recognizing local youth for their participation in its annual art and writing conservation contests.

The topic of the 2014 contest was “The Soil Daily Times.” Schools participating in this year’s contest were Hustonville, Lincoln County High School, Lloyd McGuffey 6th Grade Center, McKinney, Stanford and Waynesburg.

Hustonville Elementary and McKinney Elementary each received a cash award from David Grigson of First Southern National Bank for having 100% participation in the conservation contests.

Stanford Elementary claimed the rights to the top award in the Conservation

WINNING ART ENTRY
The winning poster in the annual Lincoln County Conservation District by Stanford Elementary’s Dani Story was hung on the wall for all to see during the District’s annual banquet.

District’s county art contest, with Dani Story declared the overall winner. Story, 8, is the daughter of Stacey and Dan Story and she is in the third grade. (No additional personal information was available.)

The second-place county winner in the art contest was Chaney Hagen. The 10-year-old artist is in the fifth grade at Waynesburg Elementary School and is the daughter of Lisa McLin. Hagen says she enjoys all subjects in school, as well as basketball, swimming and reading.

Tanner Combs, the son of Steve and Lisa Combs, is this year’s second-place county art winner. Combs, a fifth-grade student at McKinney Elementary, enjoys deer hunting, riding a four-wheeler in mud holes, baseball and basketball. In school, his favorite subject is science or social studies.

Dickie Cooper and District Supervisor W. C. Brogle made the presentation of the county art awards.

Racheal Floyd, a junior at Lincoln County High School, was the winner of the county writing contest. Floyd, 17, enjoys animal science studies and learning French. She likes to spend her free time volunteering, reading and gardening.

The second place writing entry in the county belonged to Rachael Lynn of the Lloyd McGuffey 6th Grade Center. Lynn, 12, is the daughter of David and Autumn Lynn. Her favorite subjects in school are language arts and social studies. In her free time, Lynn enjoys reading, playing the saxophone and playing video games.

Sara Johnson, a senior at Lincoln County High School, claimed the third-place award in the county writing contest. Johnson, 18, is the daughter of Daniel and Julie Johnson. Her favorite subjects in school are chorus and animal science. Johnson’s favorite pastimes include singing, working at the Rockcastle Veterinary Clinic and learning different languages.

The county writing winners were presented their awards by Justin Poynter of PBK Bank and Supervisor Bud Bright.

Special honor awards were presented to two of the county’s teachers with Amanda Gay and Denise Thomas being recognized for teaching the county art and writing winners.

Gay teaches third grade at Hustonville Elementary and is the teacher of county art winner Dani Story. Gay said she feels the conservation contests provide students with an opportunity to creatively express their thoughts and ideas on conserving the earth’s natural resources. Thomas teaches county writing winner Racheal Floyd at LCHS. She said she feels the writing contest is an important event because it is part of the writing curriculum, it showcases Ag students’ skills and the students get recognized for their work.

The presentation of the teacher awards was made by Josh Brown of the Lincoln County Farm Bureau Federation and District Supervisor Paul Jeffries.

The overall school winners in the Conservation District Art Contest, listed by their schools, were:

Hustonville Elementary: Dakota Richards, 1st, Jacob Martin, 2nd, and Parker Benge, 3rd.

McKinney Elementary: Tanner Combs, 1st, Hailey Carter, 2nd, and Jayden Coleman, 3rd.

Stanford Elementary: Dani Story, 1st, Carson Greer, 2nd, and Chloe Tillett, 3rd.

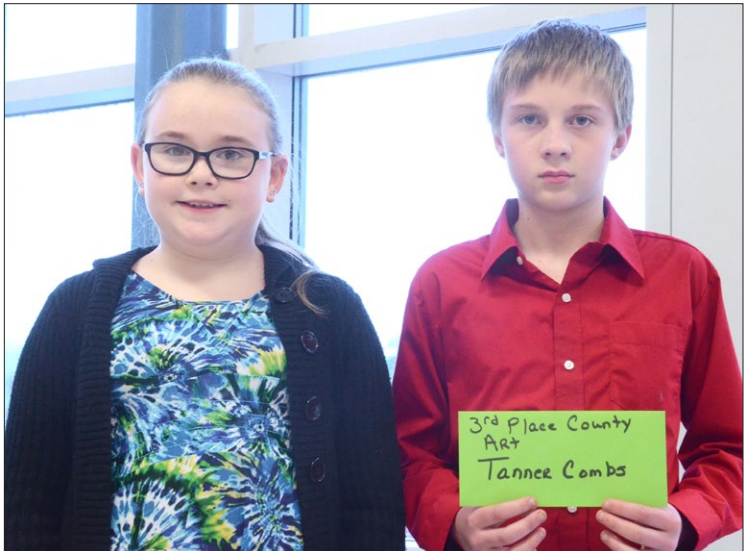

Waynesburg Elementary: Chaney Hagan, 1st, Maili Cole, 2nd, and Kyndra Watt, 3rd.

The overall school writing winners were:

Lincoln County High School: Racheal Floyd, 1st, Sara Johnson, 2nd, and Kaylee Brown, 3rd.

Lloyd McGuffey 6th Grade Center: Rachael Lynn, 1st, and Tara Watson, 2nd.

School art and writing awards were presented by District Supervisors John Peek, Dale Osterman and Kenny Stamper.
